

Education Outreach

Twenty years ago I got my start as an activist having heard about a neighbor that showed documentaries on current events and important issues. I didn't know the hosts or any attendees but began to build relationships and get invited to events. You can be that catalyst for your neighborhood, book club, activist group or precinct.

In the 1940s and 50's, as Europeans fought back against totalitarianism, homes would be designated as a community meeting place where people would get together for discussions, support and advice. They would watch plays or movies like High Noon to encourage discussion about necessary virtues, like courage, with family members and friends. We can be that resource for our families, friends and neighbors, during these challenging times.

Check out our Moms for Liberty - King County website (<https://portal.momsforliberty.org/chapters/king-county-wa/>) and look under Resources. Suggestions will be marked as EO for Education Outreach. Pages you might be interested in, will be added regularly.

Please let me know what you are doing and I can provide emails for people in your area. And of course I would love to hear about your event or suggestions for resources!
